Entsch Exposes Sham Conservation Fundraising: “Daintree Not at Risk”

Federal Member for Leichhardt, Warren Entsch, has slammed the Gondwana Rainforest Trust for what he calls blatant deception, accusing the organisation of misleading donors by falsely claiming that land in the Daintree Rainforest is at risk of development.

At the centre of the controversy is Lot 92 Cape Tribulation Road, a property the group is actively fundraising for under the pretence that it must be “saved” from destruction. However, official advice from Douglas Shire Council has confirmed that the site is not at risk of development under any circumstances.

“The claims being made by Gondwana Rainforest Trust are completely false,” Mr Entsch said. “They are telling donors that this land is under imminent threat of clearing and development, when in reality, it is zoned for conservation and cannot be built on, cleared, or developed in any way.”

Council Confirms: No Development Possible

In written advice provided to Mr Entsch’s office, Douglas Shire Council has stated that Lot 92 is within a protected conservation zone and has no development rights. The land falls within Precinct 1 – General Conservation, meaning that unless there is previous lawful clearing on the site—which there is not, based on historic aerial imagery—it cannot be lawfully developed or altered.

“This isn’t speculation. The local government planning authority has confirmed in writing that this land cannot and will not be developed. Yet Gondwana is still running a public misinformation campaign—claiming that Lot 92 is zoned for development—to con well-meaning donors into thinking they’re ‘saving’ something that was never in danger in the first place,” Mr Entsch said.

False Advertising and Potential Fraud

The Gondwana Rainforest Trust is currently running 24 separate advertisements on social media platforms, soliciting donations with misleading claims that the Daintree Rainforest is under threat. These advertisements use sensationalised imagery and even feature Sir David Attenborough, despite no evidence that he has endorsed their campaign.

Mr Entsch says this raises serious legal and ethical concerns.

“This is nothing short of fraudulent. Under Section 408C of the Queensland Criminal Code, it is illegal to dishonestly obtain a benefit or advantage through deception,” he said.

False advertising in charity fundraising is also unlawful, and Mr Entsch is now calling for the appropriate authorities to investigate.

Communities Under Siege by Fake Environmentalists

Mr Entsch, a long-time advocate for balanced environmental conservation that respects both the land and the people who live there, says groups like Gondwana Rainforest Trust do not engage with local communities but instead operate as ideological activists.

“For decades, we have seen outsider groups parachute into the Daintree and dictate to the locals as if they don’t belong there,” he said. “This is yet another example of a group profiting off deception while undermining the very people who actually live in and care for this environment.”

Entsch to Meet with Daintree Locals Next Week

These developments come as Mr Entsch prepares to visit the Daintree early next week to meet with local residents and discuss ongoing conservation efforts.

“I will be up there meeting with the community, hearing their concerns, and standing with them against these deceptive fundraising tactics. The people who live in the Daintree deserve to be respected—not vilified by self-serving activist groups,” he said.

“It is deeply disturbing that organisations like this keep springing up in the area. I suspect that their aim is to land bank solely for their own financial benefit. They weaponise these emotional claims of rainforest destruction—which couldn’t be further from the truth and actually only serves to hurt the reputation of the Daintree community,”

“I honestly would not be surprised if one day these organisations suddenly became the future developers of some of these sites that they’ve already acquired,” he said.

Mr Entsch is urging the ACNC (Australian Charities and Not-for-profits Commission) and consumer protection authorities to investigate whether the Gondwana Rainforest Trust is in breach of their obligations as a charity.

“According to ACNC financial records the Gondwana Rainforest Trust is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars annually between fundraising activities, communications and advocacy. These efforts are not just within Australia, they are soliciting donations from overseas as well,”

“If you’ve donated to this campaign believing this land was under threat, you’ve been misled. I suggest you ask for your money back.”

Save the Daintree Rainforest

20h · 🌐

You can Save the Daintree Rainforest. When Lot 92 Cape Tribulation Road was offered for sale by a real estate agent we acted quickly and raised the funds for a deposit. Now we have the option to buy this 8.9 hectare freehold property and ensure it's protected forever. Every $5 you donate will purchase and protect 1 sqm of Lot 92 Cape Tribulation Road at Cow Bay. Please see more information and donate now at <https://www.savethedaintree.org/lot-92-cape-tribulation-road>

The beautiful rainforest on Lot 92 Cape Tribulation Road deserves the same level of protection as the Daintree National Park that borders it, but this freehold property is currently zoned for rural residential development by the Douglas Shire Council.

For just $5 a square metre, you can help us purchase and protect this incredibly important piece of the Daintree Lowland Rainforest.

Subject: L92 on RP738933 Cape Tribulation Road

Hi Sam,

Thanks for your enquiry regarding land use rights and status of Lot 92 on Cape Tribulation Road.

The current planning scheme (2018 Douglas Shire Planning Scheme) zones this land within the Conservation zone.

The planning scheme also includes 'local plan' precincts which trump the zoning of land and give or restrict land use rights.

Lot 92 is within Precinct 1- 'General Conservation'. This means that if there is no lawfully established and maintained clearing on the site, then it has no land use rights and cannot be cleared or developed. So if an applicant submitted a development application for a land use, they would have to provide evidence of lawful clearing on the site, and demonstrate that the clearing has been maintained, as part of the Development Application documentation. This is fairly easy to assess because we have access to historic and current aerial imagery.

Historic imagery on the qld governments Qimagery website shows no clearing in the last decade from what I can see.

See the local plan mapping from the planning scheme here: <https://douglas.qld.gov.au/download/planning-scheme/LPM-002-Diwan-Cow-Bay-Local-Plan-Precincts-Map.pdf>

I can provide the sections from the planning scheme which set this framework out if necessary.

See imagery below of the site with no clearings:

Essentially this site is not at risk of development.

Kind regards,

Help protect Lot 463 Black Bean Road in the world's oldest continuously existing tropical rainforest, the Daintree. Donate now at <https://www.savethedaintree.org/lot-463-black-bean-road>

Located in Cow Bay, Far North Queensland, the Daintree Rainforest and the Wet Tropics has been described by David Attenborough as "the most extraordinary place on earth." A refuge for the world's most ancient flowering plants and unique and endangered animals, the Daintree has a lineage of more than 150 million years, making it the world's oldest continuously existing tropical rainforest.

Lot 463 Black Bean Road is a 1.4-hectare (14,000 square metre) property located in Cow Bay, adjacent to the World Heritage-listed Daintree National Park. This property is home to endangered species like the southern cassowary and the spectacled flying-fox, but it's the rainforest itself that is critically important.

We need to raise funds now so this property can be protected forever and managed for conservation. By protecting Lot 463 Black Bean Road, we ensure connectivity across the landscape, preventing fragmentation of the rainforest that is critical for biodiversity.

Fragmentation occurs when forests are divided into smaller blocks, creating what is known as the "edge effect." This has been shown to harm biodiversity by disrupting natural processes, such as the movement of species and the regeneration of native plants.

The vegetation on Lot 463 Black Bean Road is classed as Regional Ecosystem 7.11.1a and 7.3.10a, which are listed as "Of Concern" under the Queensland Vegetation Management Act 1999. It provides critical habitat for species like the endangered southern cassowary and the spectacled flying-fox. Managing this land for conservation will ensure their long-term survival.

Electric ants are spreading in the Daintree Rainforest, threatening its ecosystem and economy. Since October 2022, new infestations have been found, requiring urgent action. As one of the world's worst invasive species, electric ants impact the environment, wildlife, agriculture, tourism, and human health. We call on Federal Environment Minister Tanya Plibersek to increase funding and take immediate action to protect the Daintree for future generations.
